Dear Mr Smith,

I refer to your recent contacts with both Telecom and AUSTEL concerning your telephone service.

In the course of these contacts you have referred on a number of occasions to evidence which appears to have been obtained from documents in a briefcase inadvertently left on your premises by a Telecom employee.

Although there is nothing in these documents to cause Telecom any concern in respect of your case, the documents remain Telecom's property and therefore are confidential to us.

I would appreciate it if you could return any documents from the briefcase still in your possession as soon as possible.

Also if you have distributed the briefcase material to other parties would you advise us to whom so we can advise them of the status of the information in their possession and request them to respect that status.

I would also ask that you do not make this material available to anyone else.

I look forward to your assistance with this matter.

Yours sincerely
